

M Rehan
25F - CY -102
Comm. Skills

Q1 What is a memorandum? Explain its purpose in business communication

A memorandum is a short internal written document used within an organization to communicate information between employees or departments. Its purpose in business communication is to share updates announce meetings give instructions and keep a written record of important matters. It is quick simple and more informal than a business letter which makes it the preferred choice for internal communication in any organization.

Q2 Write a memorandum to inform employees about a meeting scheduled for next week.

TO: All Employees FROM: Management DATE: April 01, 2026 SUBJECT: Staff Meeting Next Week

This is to inform all employees that a staff meeting has been scheduled for Monday April 8 2026 at 10:00 AM in Conference Room B. Attendance of all employees is mandatory. The meeting will cover important updates regarding company policies and upcoming projects. Please make sure you are on time and bring any relevant documents. For any queries contact the HR department.

Q3 What are the main parts of a memorandum?

The main parts of a memorandum are the heading which includes To From Date and Subject, the opening which briefly states the purpose of the memo, the body which contains the main message or details, and the closing which may include a call to action or contact information. Some memos also include attachments if any additional documents are needed.

Q4 Differentiate between a memorandum and a business letter.

A memorandum is used for internal communication within an organization while a business letter is written to external parties. A memo is informal and brief while a business letter is formal and detailed. A memo uses To From Date and Subject format while a business letter includes full addresses and formal salutation and closing.

Q5 Why is a memorandum used for internal communication in an organization?

A memorandum is used for internal communication because it is quick simple and easy to write. It keeps a written record of information shared among employees and ensures everyone is informed about important updates decisions or instructions. It is also more convenient than a business letter as it does not require a formal structure.

Q6 What is public speaking and why is it important?

Public speaking is the act of delivering a speech or presentation to an audience in a structured and intentional manner. It is important because it helps in sharing ideas influencing others building confidence and developing leadership skills. In professional life good public speaking helps a person communicate effectively present ideas clearly and leave a strong impression on others.

Q7 What are the main qualities of an effective public speaker?

The main qualities of an effective public speaker are confidence clarity and the ability to engage the audience. A good speaker should have strong body language maintain eye contact and speak at a proper pace. They should be well prepared knowledgeable about their topic and able to handle questions confidently. Good listening skills a pleasant tone and the ability to adapt to the audience are also important qualities of an effective public speaker.

Q8 What are the common barriers to effective public speaking?

The common barriers to effective public speaking are stage fear lack of preparation poor voice clarity and nervousness. Other barriers include lack of confidence inability to engage the audience use of complex language and poor body language. Distractions in the environment lack of eye contact and not knowing the audience well can also become major barriers to delivering an effective speech.

Q9 Explain the basic principles of effective writing.

The basic principles of effective writing are clarity conciseness correctness and proper organization. Clarity means the message should be easy to understand. Conciseness means avoiding unnecessary words and keeping the writing short and to the point. Correctness means using proper grammar spelling and punctuation. Organization means arranging ideas in a logical order so the reader can follow the message easily. These principles together make writing clear professional and effective.

Q10 Why are writing techniques important in professional communication?

Writing techniques are important in professional communication because they help convey the message accurately clearly and professionally. Good writing techniques create a positive impression on the reader and ensure that the message is understood correctly. They help avoid confusion misunderstandings and errors in communication. In a professional setting well written documents letters and emails reflect the credibility and competence of a person and contribute to the overall success of the organization.

Q11 Discuss the role of clarity and conciseness in writing.

Clarity means writing in a way that is easy to understand with simple and direct language so the reader can grasp the message without confusion. Conciseness means expressing ideas in as few words as possible without leaving out important information. Together clarity and conciseness make writing more effective and professional. They save the reader time and ensure the message is delivered accurately. In professional communication clear and concise writing reflects good skills and leaves a strong impression on the reader.

Q12 How can a writer make their writing clear and effective?

A writer can make their writing clear and effective by using simple and direct language and avoiding unnecessary words. They should organize ideas in a logical order and keep sentences short and to the point. Proofreading before sending helps remove errors and improves quality. Knowing the purpose of the message and the audience also helps in writing more effectively. Using active voice proper punctuation and correct grammar further makes the writing clear and professional.

Q13 What are telephone skills in business communication?

Telephone skills in business communication refer to the ability to speak clearly politely and professionally over the phone to handle business matters effectively. These skills include greeting the caller properly listening carefully speaking at a proper pace taking notes and ending the call politely. Good telephone skills also involve using a pleasant tone being patient and responding to queries confidently. These skills are essential for creating a good impression and maintaining professional relationships with clients and colleagues.

Q14 Why are telephone skills important in professional communication?

Telephone skills are important in professional communication because the phone is often the first point of contact with clients and a good impression builds trust and confidence. Poor telephone skills can damage the reputation of a person or organization while good skills help in building strong professional relationships. Effective telephone communication ensures that messages are delivered clearly misunderstandings are avoided and business matters are handled efficiently and professionally.

Q15 Explain the basic rules for effective telephone communication in business.

The basic rules for effective telephone communication in business are to always greet the caller politely and introduce yourself and your organization. Speak clearly and at a proper pace so the caller can understand you easily. Listen carefully without interrupting and take notes if necessary. Always be patient and professional even if the caller is difficult. Avoid using informal language and slang. If you need to put the caller on hold always ask for permission first. End the call politely by thanking the caller and confirming any action that needs to be taken.